

Answers to the exercises for chapter: T_EX

– visuals

1.

```
\def\Header#1{\medskip
\hbox{\bfseries #1}
\setcounter{vcount}{1}
\everypar{\hbox to 0pt{\hskip-10pt $\bullet$\hss}%
\everypar{}}
}
```

Paragraph one and two

Output:

the title

- Paragraph one

and two

2. Recall that macro:

```
\def\Hang#1{\hbox to 0pt
{\raise 1.2ex \vbox to 0pt
{\hbox{#1}\vss}\hss}}
\input hangmacro
\begin{minipage}[t]{3in}
\def\biginitial#1{\hskip-20pt \Hang{\huge #1}\hskip 20pt}
\parindent=0pt
```

```
\everypar{\hangafter=-2 \hangindent=20pt \biginitial}
```

This is an old-fashioned mediaeval paragraph that has lots of text and a very long first sentence. The second sentence is also long, and only serves the purpose to make this more than 2 or so lines long. For good measure we throw in a third line which should make this four lines long, if not five with a little luck.

Also, the second paragraph is an old-fashioned mediaeval paragraph that has lots of text and a very long first sentence. The second sentence is also long, and only serves the purpose to make this more than 2 or so lines long. For good measure we throw in a third line which should make this four lines long, if not five with a little luck.

`\end{minipage}`

Output:

This is an old-fashioned mediaeval paragraph that has lots of text and a very long first sentence. The second sentence is also long, and only serves the purpose to make this more than 2 or so lines long. For good measure we throw in a third line which should make this four lines long, if not five with a little luck.

Also, the second paragraph is an old-fashioned mediaeval paragraph that has lots of text and a very long first sentence. The second sentence is also long, and only serves the purpose to make this more than 2 or so lines long. For good measure we throw in a third line which should make this four lines long, if not five with a little luck.